LONG CHASE OF A THIEF

ARRESTED IN SPANISH HONDURAS FOR THE THEFT OF $41,000.

He Stole It While En Route to the Treasury Department, and the Money Was Changed for Brown

NEW YORK, April 4 .- A Herald special from Tegucigalpa, Spanish Honduras, says: Edmund Sturgts Crawford has been arrested at Santa Barbara for the theft of a package containing $41,000 in transit from the American Exchange National Bank in New York to the Adams Express Company's office.

The package was addressed to the United States Treasurer at Washington. A large portion of the money was found in Crawford's possession. The robbery was committed in New York, May 4, 1888. Crawford has confessed, and implicates two others. The Herald says the express company has spent $25,000 in tracing Crawford. He was a messenger in the bank when he committed the theft. Pinkerton says Crawford's confession implicates some fast New Yorkers. Crawford was living as a planter in Honduras, and passed for a man of wealth.

The robbery will be well remembered here in Washington. Cashier Burns of the American Exchange National Bank, at the northeast corner of Cedar street and Broadway, New York, had on Friday. May 4, 1888, supervised the tying up of $41,000 in greenbacks of $5, $10 $50 and $100 denominations to be de livered to Adams Express Company for transmission to the Treasury at Washington for redemption.

Five splashes of red sealing wax impressed with the bank's seal, covered as many knots of stout cord. A white label, on which was printed "From the American Exchange Bank, New York, to the United States Treasury, Washington, D. C.," was then pasted on top ington, D. C., 'was then pasted on top and the package was ready for delivery. The two most trusted messengers of the bank, Crawford and Earle by name, were detailed to deliver the package to the express company. They did so, presumably in each other's company, turning the good sized bundle over to Mr. J. C. Young, at No. 59 Broadway, whose special duty it was to receive and receint for such valueshies. The express receipt for such valuables. The express company's receipt was returned to the bank, the package was put into a porta-ble safe and that night was sent to Washington, guarded by Adams Express messengers.

United States Treasurer James W. Hyatt, through an employe named Rog-ers, received but would not receipt for the package, as its appearance was dis trustful to the experienced eye. Put-ting it to one side the Adams Express agent at the Treasury Department, Mr. Blanchard, was summoned. The package, when opened in his presence, was found to contain nothing but slips of wrapping paper, such as is used by butchers, neatly cut in the size of bank

There was no end of consultation be tween the Government, bank and express officials, in which Inspector Byrnes and Pinkerton's Detective Agency played prominent and mys-terious parts. No information was vouchsafed to the press, and after a few months the incident was seemingly forgotten. Adams Express Company quietly paid over the $41,000 to the bank and went about its big business as if it had forgotten all about the loss and suspected no one.

The thief was the trusted bank messenger, Edmund Sturgis Crawford, now caught red-handed, nearly two years afterward in a foreign land, where he passed himself off as the manager of a

Will Miss Raymond Meet Miss Gilbert and Blow for $1,000?

A LADY CORNETIST'S CHALLENGE,

Miss Bessie Gilbert, the great lady cornetist, who appears at Kernan's next week, has issued a challenge to play any lady in the world for $1,000. Of this amount $500 has been deposited to make a match. While the challenge does not specify any one in particular, it is understood to be directed against Mrs. F. B. Alvord of this city. Prior to her marriage Mrs. Alvord was Miss Alice Raymond, and was considered one of the greatest lady cornetists on the variety stage.

Her only rival was Miss Gilbert, and a number of unsuccessful efforts were made to bring the two together in a public contest to settle the question of superiority. Both claim the title of champion, and although Miss Raymond has retired from the stage, she is unwilling to admit that she has any superior as a performer on the cornet.

At the present time, however, it is unlikely that any notice will be taken of Miss Gilbert's challenge. There are a number of reasons for this, the main one being that Mrs. Alvor 1 has been sick for some time and, consequently, not able to practice.

A CRITIC reporter yesterday saw Mr. Alvord, and, in reply to a question whether his wife would accept Miss Gilbert's challenge, he said: "My wife has permanently retired from the stage, and she would not consent to appear in a contest on the variety stage again. If a match could be held at the Na-tional or Albaugh's or Lincoln Hall my wife would be willing to meet Miss Gil ert.
"It would be impossible, however, to have it take place in less than a month. for Mrs. Alvord has been quite sick all winter and, consequently, has not had sufficient practice to justify her in ap-pearing in a public exhibition, while, on the other hand, Miss Gilbert has been playing constantly all season.

"Two years ago, in Philadelphia, my wife challenged Miss Gilbert and she refused it. Now that my wife is off the stage Miss Gilbert wants to play her. We would not be willing to play on the variety stage, but if a proper challenge is issued and the arrangements are satisfactory my wife will meet her. Otherwise we shall pay no attention to her challenges." It is expected, however, notwith-standing Mr. Alvord's statement, that the match will come off next week, and

Experience of a Visitor to One of Georgia's Dry Towns,

From the Atlanta Constitution. A modest-looking old gentleman had a group of earnest listeners in an electric car the other day. He was talking about his visit to a town in one of the dry countles. "It was cold when I arrived," he said. "The thermometer was down to zero, if not a few degrees below, and I felt that I needed, and must have, a good, stiff toddy. I went to every drug store in the town, and, as nobody knew me. I experienced great difficulty in getting anything. At last a druggist sold me what he called a bottle of 'strengthening cordial.' He told me in a whisper that it 'would do the work.' I did not believe him then, but I did afterward.

I did afterward.
"After the first drink," the old man continued, "I felt that the town was a very small one, and that I was the superior of the druggist in every respect.

"After the second I felt that it was my duty to whip the druggist, and would have done so, if he had not escaped through the window and left me in full possession.

"After the third drink I went out and inquired the way to the mayor's residence. Arrived there, I told him he was a small man and that I had come a hundred miles to whip him.

'He regarded me earnestly for a moment; then, as I stumbled down the steps, I thought I heard him remark to his wife, 'He's been taking a dose of that 'cordial' stuff that laid me up for six weeks. May the Lord have mercy

'Amen!' said his wife, plously, 'for He's beyond the help of man."

Here the car stopped and the old gentleman got out, leaving the passengers to wonder how he got out of that town.

FROM THE PHONOGRAPH.

The Grand Old Man Talks and is Talked to by the Machine,

New York, April 4 .- A highly interesting illustration of the practical operations of the phonograph was given at the Hoffman House last evening. The occasion was a banquet given to some of his old Army friends and other friends by Colonel G. E. Gouraud, who has been for many years identified with the application of various electrical inventions to useful purposes of life in different European countries. Although Colonel Gouraud is an American and served with distinction as a staff officer in the Union Army during the civil war, he resides in England, which accounts for the presence of the British Consul-General among the guests and the profuse display of British and American flags among the decorations at the banquet.

The invited guests included also General W. T. Sherman, General O. O. Howard, General Wagner Swayne, General Stewart L. Woodford, General Horace Porter, General Louis Fitz ceraid, General Egbert L. Viele, Colonel Vollum, Medical Director United States Army; Colonel Floyd Clarkson, Colonel Finley Anderson, Thomas A. Edison, Walter P. Phillips, ex-Minister Nicholas Fish, Jesse Seligman, Frederick R. Coudert, and many other well known gentlemen.

The military feature of the evening was Colonel Gouraud's special muster into the Grand Army of the Republic of Lafayette Post by a dispensation of the department commander, Colonel Clark-

EX-QUEEN NATALIE'S FINGER

In the European Political Pit -- A Gladstonian Defeat,

LONDON, April 4 .- The return of Mr. Barry, Conservative, to the vacant seat for Windsor in the House of Commons was a surprise to the Tories and a stunning blow to the Gladstonians, who ex pected to easily overcome the comparatively small majority against them. As in several other cases of late, over-confidence was the cause of the Liberal rout. While they were talking loudly in London of the ease with which they would capture the seat, the Conserva-tives were quietly, steadily and effect-ively working among the electors. The Gladstonians were aware of the efforts the Tories were making, but re-garded their activity as a sign of the Government's weakness and lack of confidence rather than an indication of the determination of the Conservatives to elect their man, and passingly pre-dicted a "walk-over." To the taunts of the Liberals the Tories paid no heed, but only labored the harder among the Rulers are getting hot shot from all sides. The victory was celebrated at several of the Conservative clubs last night, where speeches were made by prominent leaders of the party.

The Gladstonians were generally very quiet last night, but several gen-tlemen prominent in the councils of the party were loud in their condemna-tion of the over confidence and apathy of those in charge of the party's inter-ests in the election, declaring that if there had been more hard work and less bluster the result would have been different. Altogether, the result is a humiliating setback for the Liberals, which doubtless will teach them a lesson in caution.

The recall of the Servian diplomatic agent from the Bulgarian capital negatives the recent assertions that the ten-sion between Servia and Bulgaria was relaxing and the differences between the two countries in a fair way of amicable settlement. This state of affairs, it was understood, was to be brought about by the intervention of the greater Powers, who shrank from a reopening of the Eastern question, for the present at least. It now appears that the breach is wider than ever thanks to the intrigues of Russian agents, and Prince Ferdinand is likely to speedily find himself confronting the boy King of Servia on the field of battle, repeating the experience of his predecessor, Prince Alexander, with the youthful monarch's father. Rumor also has it that the Servian administration has again become almost thoroughly Russianized come almost thoroughly Russianized through the quiet but well-directed efforts of ex-Queen Natalie, and the rupture between Servia and Bulgaria is merely to go far enough to afford the Czar a pretext for armed interference in the ostensible interest of peace. The Times' Vienna correspondent, in dispatch to that paper, declares that diplomatic relations between Servia and Bulgaria have been entirely broken off.

JESUS AND THE JEWS. Was the Saviour Rejected by "God's Chosen People?

From the New York Son. Rabbi Gotthell is preaching at the Temple Emanuel, the magnificent Jewish synagogue in the Fifth avenue. a series of very striking sermons, ex-plaining and defending the attitude of the Jews toward Jesus and his teachings while the founder of Christianity was still on earth. As Dr. Gotthell is a man of learning, of much breadth of view, and a philosophic spirit, these discourses deserve the careful consideration of Christians. There is no bitterness in them, and they are respectful of Christian sentiment and conviction.

He has pointed out that, as in the days of Jesus, the Jews were already widely scattered, and the means of communication were slow and difficult only a small minority of the race within the boundaries of Judea were cognicant of the mission, the teachings, the doings and the very existence of the Christ. The great majority were in complete ignorance of his life and the manner of his death, and therefore could not be held accountable for the tragedy of Calvary.

The New Testament in many places records that in Judea itself, wherever he went, he was followed by crowds, who listened eagerly to his doctrines. He was admitted into the synagogues, though his teachings were subversive of the prevailing religion and the existing social system, and when he drove the money changers from the temple itself it is not recorded that anybody rose up in opposition. He bitterly assailed the Pharisees, the fathers of the Jewish synagogues, and yet when he predicted the ruin of the temple and nation, and some of the hearers picked up stones to cast at him, the Scribes and Pharisees gathered about for his protection.

This is the way in which Dr. Got-thell reads the Gospels. They seem to-him to show that the contemporary Jewish spirit was liberal rather than otherwise, tolerant and receptive; that the Jews rejected Jesus only "as God or part of the Deity." As a moral in-structor they listened to him with re-spect. As a worker of miracles He was sure to appeal to the popular desire, and the crowds about him were so great that he had to escape from them by stealth. As the redeemer of the world they would gladly have accepted him if they could have comprehended the mystery.

As the Messiah they neither accepted nor rejected him, but waited for proofs to sustain the claim, their teaching hav-ing been that the Messiah was to be an earthly ruler, not one who was to lead them into the kingdom of heaven. Jesus was loved and respected of the people and opposed by a few priests only. When he entered into Jerusalem "he had a royal reception, and some cried, 'Hosannah to the Son of David,' so that the whole city was stirred by the

This is a view of the subject which will be novel for Christian readers generally. It is not presented in the Christian commentaries on the New Testament, and yet the Gospel records sustain it. Undoubtedly, the Jews as a mass rejected Jesus in his supernatural character, but in that respect were hey different from a large part of the leading intellects of our own day? The more their intellectual training the more inclined they were to criticise his claims to Divinity; but is not that the case to a large extent in the modern Christian world?

The Scribes who were guardians the public peace were appalled by his revolutionary doctrines. They believed that they would utterly upset the exist-ing social order, break up the family, overturn the authority of government and introduce communism and anarchy in their place. But has not Christen-dom practically expressed the same belief by refusing to mold society after the model of Jesus, and by constructing it on radically different and directly opposing principles?

To use the phrase of St. Paul, does it not crucify Him afresh and continually? Let Christians ask themselves, therefore, whether Rabbi Gotthell is not justified in inquiring if, in actual practice, they accept the teachings of Jesus as divine commands any more than do the Jews. Is it not true that, like the Jews of old, they take such parts of His system as suit their own opinions and convenience and cast aside the rest?

HOW HE GOT THERE. And How the Other Fellow Pell Into the Water and Got Left,

From the New York Sun. It had a two weeks' leave once, before I was married," said Pay Inspeciar L. G. In fact, my interest in her has never seemed to grow less, for she has been called Mrs. Billings of late years, "Well, I was over there the last evening of my time ashore, and wanted to stay as long as possible, so I planned to take the last ferry-boat that would connect with my train, so that I could join my ship in the morning. I caught the last horse car at 11 o'clock, but there was a delay, somehow, about three or four blocks from the ferry, and I had to improve the for I had to improve the same for it for I I had to jump off and run for it, for I was already late. I got to the ferry house just as the boat was leaving, and as there were no gates I dashed out on the pler neck and neck with another last man. The dock hands tried to head us off, for the boat was already under way, but we dodged them and the other fellow got ahead of me and made a jump for the retreating boat. He fell short and went down into the water with a souse.

"I hardly stopped to think about the other fellow or what would become of him. What was I to do? The boat was him. What was I to do? The boat was thirty feet from the pier, and unless I got aboard I couldn't catch my train. Unless I went by that train I should miss my ship, for she sailed at daybreak on a two or three months' cruise. I might be severely reprimanded, or even dismissed the service, if I didn't report dismissed the service, if I didn't report on board before she sailed.

"But the other fellow's ill wind blew me into good luck. He was kicking around there in the water, and the ferry boat stopped, backed a little, and threw a line to him. That saved me. I clambored up on the spiles at the side of the dock, ran out over their unsteady ends, and hopped on top of the cabin "So I caught my boat and my train and my ship; but the poor chap that fell into the water didn't get the line from the boat at all, but was hauled out by the men on the pier and had to stand there dripping and swearing and see the ferry-boat go off without him, after all."

Missits,

From the Philadelphia Record. It is given out at Washington that the White House doesn't suit the Harrisons. The opinion prevails throughout the country that the Harrisons are not a good fit in the White House. It is clear that a mistake has been made by somebody.
